Aduwa Is Expected To Fall; Italians Push Ethiopian War

BRIDGES AND RAILWAYS ARE BEING BOMBED

Fascists Attacking Along 3 Fronts as Emperor Appeals To League.

COUNCIL WILL ASK CESSATION

Asmara, Eritrea, Oct. 4 (AP)—Italian sources declared this evening that the fall of Aduwa "Verdun of Ethiopia" was imminent.

The Fascists' column had advanced to the hills 10 miles away commanding the plain on which the city is situated.

Bombing planes soared overhead and tanks sprayed bullets to lead the advance.

Those forces already in position held their ground without difficulty. Italians said that "heavy casualties" had been inflicted upon the natives.

To Bomb Railways
An official source declared that while the western advance moved on 30,000 Italians were massed near the border of Italian Somaliland to the east, ready to advance into the rich province of Aussa.

Other columns were reported poised for a drive on Herar, key city, capital of the province of that name, with the objective of cutting the Djibouti-Addis Ababa railway Ethiopia's only means of bringing supplies from abroad.

Planes were expected to load hundreds of pounds of high explosive bombs to be dropped on the railway bridges over the Hawash river.

Walwal, site of the historic skirmish that touched off the whole Italo-Ethiopian quarrel, was said to be the scene of another concentration of Italian fighting men.

Admit Massacre
(Copyright, 1935, By Associated Press) Geneva, Oct. 4—Italy is carrying out its openly proclaimed threat to conquer and unarm Ethiopia, the Emperor telegraphed to the league today.

Asserting that Italy admitted an invasion of the Agame district and bombardment of two towns with massacre of women and children the emperor said he was determined to cooperate with the league.

The emperor was considered by league officials to be making a bid for sanctions against Italy and to be indicating his willingness to bow to any decision under the covenant.

An urgent demand for both sides to cease fighting immediately will be the league council's first act (Continued on Page Two)

For the second play of the Owl and Nightingale dramatic club, Doctor Arms plans to use all Gettysburg co-eds for feminine parts.

FAIRFIELD BANK ROBBER SUSPECT TO BE SENT HERE

Harry Carbaugh Is Reported to Conclude Sentence in Tennessee—see This Month.

TO BE BROUGHT TO THIS COUNTY

Harry Carbaugh, of near Mont Alto, suspected of staging the daring, one-man hold-up and robbery of the Fairfield national bank, September 14, 1933, and who is now serving a three-year sentence on a chain-gang in Tennessee, is expected to be released some time this month and turned over to Adams county authorities to answer to the charge of robbing the Fairfield bank.

Carbaugh is suspected by state police as being the lone bandit who robbed the Fairfield bank of $659. He is believed to have stolen a blue, coach-type automobile from Ira D. Kuhn, Waynesboro, on the night of September 13, 1933, and to have driven the machine to his home near Mont Alto.

Bank Robbed Of $659
On the morning of September 14 Carbaugh is charged with having blackened his face and driven to the Fairfield bank at 9:45 o'clock.

He is said to have entered the bank and held up Robert B. Martin, cashier, and Arthur M. Moore, assistant cashier, at the point of a revolver and to have scooped up $659 in cash and escaped. He then is charged with driving his stolen machine from Fairfield out the Orrtanna road and to have turned off onto the Cold Springs road, where he eluded his pursuers.

State and local police conducted a search for the bandit, but to have lost all clue to his trail in the thickly wooded section of the South Mountains.

Trooper William Kasparovich is said to have tracked Carbaugh to a small store in the South Mountains, but when the trooper entered the front door Carbaugh is said to have escaped out the back door and into the woods, where his knowledge of mountain trails and back roads served him in good stead in eluding his pursuers.

Police continued their search, despite their inability to secure any information from residents of that section of the county.

Find Burned Car
On October 9 the burned wreckage of the stolen Waynesboro machine was found by troopers, but there was no clue to the whereabouts of Carbaugh.

A bearded man was seen wandering through the woods and mountains, but police were unable to apprehend him, the wanderer eluding apprehension. It is not known whether the bearded man was Carbaugh or a stranger.

A special detail of state police continued a rigid search and maintained a constant lookout for Carbaugh for several months.

In February of 1934 State Police tracked Carbaugh to a chain-gang in Tennessee, where he had been arrested for robbery and sentenced to serve three years.

According to reliable information received by The Gettysburg Times, Carbaugh is scheduled to be released some time this month. A detainer lodged against him with Tennessee authorities will automatically turn him over to Adams county authorities, who will charge him with the bank robbery.

MAROONS FACE STIFF BATTLE

Crippled High School Squad Battles Waynesboro on Foreign Field.

Facing what looms as an even tougher assignment than that of last week, Gettysburg high school's crippled football machine will battle Waynesboro high, at Waynesboro, Saturday afternoon.

Injuries received last Saturday played havoc in the Maroons' lineup with the result that several new faces may appear when the clubs lock horns.

George Hayberger, veteran full-back, is almost definitely out of the game. He is suffering with an injured left leg. Coach Forney will probably shift Weikert to fullback with Bernard Stock pairing off with Stites at the halfbacks. Phil Everhart will again handle the signal calling from the quarterback position.

Other Injuries
The line too has suffered from injuries. Although he has reported for practice each day, Johnny Yingling is far from being in tip-top form, but he will probably start the game. Should he be assigned to the bench he would probably be replaced by Clyde Little a guard, who has shown considerable improvement this week. Francis Linn, first string substitute guard, has a damaged wrist. Jim Tawney, left end, has a bad leg, but will undoubtedly be in the opening lineup, although Bob Lefever may get the call. Ken Tawney reported for practice for the first time this week, Thursday, after an attack of gripe and expects to be in condition for the game.

With his machine hampered as it is by injuries, Coach Forney is non-committal as to the outcome of the Waynesboro tilt.

Waynesboro has one of its heaviest lines in years and in the game with York last week displayed plenty of power. The backfield is said to be inexperienced but flashed great possibilities in the opening battle.

Coach Forney will take a squad of 22 players to Waynesboro. The team will travel by bus.

EARLE GETS BAG OF CHESTNUTS

Secretary Buchanan Presents Nuts Raised on Mont Alto Trees.

Governor Earle received a bag of native Pennsylvania chestnuts, Thursday, a rarity in state forests because blight has made them virtually extinct.

Secretary of Forests and Waters Thomas C. Buchanan gave the chestnuts to the governor. They were gathered at Mont Alto state forest by research foresters who are nursing a stand of chestnut sprouts.

Once the most abundant nut tree in the commonwealth, chestnut is now the scarcest. The deadly chestnut blight, a bark disease which migrated from Europe about thirty years ago, destroyed practically every native chestnut tree in the state.

Buchanan said the chestnut was not wiped out only because of its ability to send up sprouts from the stumps. Although these sprouts also became blighted and most of them die long enough to bear sparse crops of fruit.

Small quantities of the nuts are planted in the state nursery at Mont Alto each year to determine whether the seedlings from them will show greater resistance to the blight.

Buchanan said foresters believe the chestnut will never develop complete immunity to the blight. However, sufficient resistance to withstand the disease is expected to be developed by the chestnut over a period of time, he said.

He was appointed immediately titular bishop of Aereopoli, and the vatican announced that Pope Pius had named him assistant to the papal throne.

Savannah, Ga., 4 (AP). — Bishop Keyes has been a priest more than 28 years. He was ordained June 11, 1907, at the Catholic University of America.

POSSIBLE ROUTE OF INVASION

European military authorities envision the routes indicated on the above map as a possible plan of Italy's invasion of Ethiopia. One army would strike from the north toward Adowa, while another would march toward Harar from the south, with the railway to the sea and Addis Ababa as goals of victory. Meantime, Italy denied rumors that Italian soldiers had entered Ethiopian territory at Mussa Ali.

African War Hops Across Ocean And Gangs Clash in New York

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Fighting, which threatened to attain riot proportions, broke out in Harlem and Brooklyn late Thursday between negroes and Italian sympathizers at odds over the Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

So tense was the situation that hard-pressed police officials went into conference at headquarters late in the day, with the outcome pointing to establishment of heavy police reserves in each precinct of the mixed neighborhoods.

The most serious trouble threatened in Brooklyn late in the day when several hundred white and negro youths swarmed from a junior high school at Saratoga avenue and Dean street to "settle" the Italian-Ethiopian feud with knives, clubs and fists.

Gang fighting among the pupils soon resulted in the gathering of a crowd of nearly 1,000, evenly divided in sympathies.

Six radio cars, the emergency police squad, a corps of detectives and Deputy Chief Inspector Edward A. Bracken, in command of Brooklyn police, answered a riot call. The crowd was dispersed, but a guard was posted in the neighborhood, populated about equally between negroes and Italians.

School authorities, after the fighting, picked up four ice picks, a billiard cue, a baseball bat and assorted clubs.

Shopkeepers in the district, in which streets were jammed by shouting pupils, reported several were injured.

In Harlem fists were swung and police were called when a group of young negroes attempted to boycott an Italian market at One Hundred and Eighteenth street and Lenox avenue. A crowd of about 150 negroes and whites gathered and fought, but the arrival of radio cars and riot squads prevented a disturbance of serious proportions.

Police considered posting a reserve of at least 1,000 in Harlem as a precautionary move.

TIGERS CLAW CHICAGO CUBS

Tommy Bridges Cuts Down National League Champions To Even Series Count.

Navin Field, Detroit, Oct. 4 (AP). —Thomas David Bridges, the Tennessee thunderbolt with the crackling curve, came to the rescue of the Detroit Tigers Thursday and hurled them right back into the middle of the coldest battle waged for baseball's world championship in ten years.

The six-hit pitching of the slim speed-ball artist, combined with a blast of semi-freezing weather and a first-inning barrage of base hits, halted the impetuous charge of the Chicago Cubs. The final score was 8 to 3 as the home team's "G-men" opened fire for the first time with their bats and drove the veteran Charley Root to cover with a four-run fusillade climaxed by Hank Greenberg's first homer of the series.

Scene Shifts To Chicago
The Tiger triumph squared matters at one game apiece, with the warfare shifting to this frigid battleground to Chicago today for the next three games. The enthusiasm of the American League champions, along with 46,742 half-frozen cash customers, was cut somewhat short by an injury to the slugging Greenberg, who hurt his left wrist sliding into the plate in the seventh inning.

Examination of Greenberg's arm by the Tiger physician, soon after the game, disclosed injured tendons, but no serious damage otherwise, and it was expected the big first sacker would be in the third game today, whether he is handicapped or not.

Anker To Oppose Lee

The rival clubs left on special trains, within an hour after the game, in order to get plenty of rest before resuming the series on the home grounds of the National league champions at Wrigley field. The pitching selections for the third game are Elden Anker, submarine-pitcher right-hander of the Tigers, and big Bill Lee, freshman right-hander of the Cubs.

The Cubs, somewhat chastened by their beating Friday, still ruled slight favorites as they hustled back to their home grounds. They have been unbeatable at home for a month, and they are confident of gaining the advantage again, with Lee in the box today and the great Lon Warneke, shoutout hero of the first game, slated to come back for the fourth game Saturday.

Chapter 45

CARROLLTOWN

Saturday night came. Emily went slowly, almost reluctantly, down the stairs, the taffeta skirt swirling about her feet. David saw her from the living-room, and came quickly to meet her. He was smiling, but his hand upon the newel post betrayed him: it was gripping the post so tightly that the knuckles stood out white.

"Portrait of a lady descending a staircase!" She smiled faintly. "It wasn't meant to be. I hate portraits; conscious ones, I mean."

"That depends," he said, "on the subject of the portrait." He slipped her hand through his arm and they moved across the shimmering floor to the living-room.

People were arriving rapidly. The orchestra took up its position in the hall and began to tune its instruments. The guests had discovered the punch bowl and were already grouped around it.

David's voice said in Emily's ear: "The first and the last dances are mine."

The orchestra began to play—a throbbing, minor rhythm which, like all negro music, seemed an echo of the jungle's heart-beat. David was before her, wordlessly holding out his arms, and she went to them with a homing motion that left him suffocated with wanting her. He closed his eyes for an instant, and brushed his lips lightly across her hair.

The dance was a great success. During supper the negroes sang, as they had sung at Carrolltown—this time a spiritual she had never heard before.

Emily was the sensation of the evening. She tried valiantly to hide the glow that David had kindled, but men and women, watching her as she danced with him, glanced at each other and smiled a little, wistfully.

Dan Raynor hadn't come—a previous engagement, he lied almost convincingly.

When the last guest had departed Judith yawned ostentatiously. "I'm not even going to look at this wreckage until morning. Good night, my children."

She went upstairs with Aubrey, whose arm was about her waist. Emily and David were alone before the living-room fire.

Emily's heart was beating so that she could hardly breathe, but her resolution was made. She said without preface:

"David, why haven't you been to Carrolltown?"

He wrenched his eyes from her's and stared into the dying fire. "Because I've been afraid. I'm going to-morrow."

She said it quickly, while her courage held. "May I go with you?" His head came up. He stared at her, unbelieving. "You mean—you'd really go?"

"I'd love it, more than anything in the world—if you'd let me."

"If I'd let you—" He turned away, staring again into the fire. She went quickly from the room and left him there.

They drove in to Montgomery the next morning to get the key to Carrolltown from a real estate agent. It was Sunday, but the agent, in answer to David's urgent request, would meet them at his office at eleven, and drive out with them.

David declined the offer. He could find the way quite well, he said into the telephone.

They left Morton Hall at half-past ten, and during the drive to Montgomery they scarcely dared to speak or look at each other. The agent was waiting at his office, and in his eagerness came with David to the car, talking rapidly.

"It's in a terrible state of repair," he explained, "but I think you'll find that it has wonderful possibilities. It's really one of the finest places in the state." He had caught David's name, but found in it nothing but coincidence.

David merely looked at him. "You're telling me?" he said, and got into the car.

Emily laughed as the car moved away. "David, he had the best intentions in the world!"

His mouth relaxed and he grinned suddenly.

"That was rough, wasn't it? I'll apologize when I see him again." He headed the car towards Carrolltown.

The pale gold of a February sun lit the rolling country through which they drove. Emily watched the fields and woods, but her mind was seeing David beside her; was absorbing every detail of his appearance, from his sun-colored hair to the heavy shoes he wore.

His eyes were fixed on the flying road beneath them and his face was white and drawn. Panic swept over her in waves; suppose she had been wrong, after all, in thinking that he wanted her; in forcing her presence upon him—It was a shameless thing to do—a thing she couldn't even imagine Frances Felton's daughter doing.

Suppose he hated her for it, and couldn't quite tell her?

And then, for the first time in nearly eight years, the car was turning into a driveway; was rolling through an avenue of trees that led to the house like an aisle to an altar—

He stopped before the wide front steps, and for a long time neither of them spoke. They were gazing at the deprecations that so short a time had wrought.

The house almost cried for paint:

great bare smudges of gray dotted the fluted columns and defaced the lofty facade. The raying fanlight was almost empty, and an occasional pane of glass leered at them with an evil wink.

The shutters had been torn away—to be used for fuel, probably, by the scattered tenants. The front steps sagged dispiritedly, and dead leaves and branches covered the driveway and the porch. And beyond the house stretched acres and acres of weeds and sapling pines.

Emily forced herself to look at David, and the expression in his eyes left her cold with fear. She said very softly:

"Would you like for me to wait here, while you go in alone?"

He turned to her quickly, and the appeal in his eyes was an answer to all her doubts.

"I couldn't stand it unless you were with me."

Hand in hand they mounted the unsteady steps and crossed the wide verandah, dead leaves rustling under their feet. David inserted the heavy key and then paused, with his hand on the knob.

"Emily, I've got no right to ask this. I'm going to be so beastly poor—" He might have been resuming a conversation interrupted a dozen seconds before.

She shook her head, holding his look with hers. "I can think of so many worse things, David." Things for instance, like life with Edwin. "Besides," her eyes twinkled, "you haven't asked me. I've done it all myself. I'm afraid."

For the first time the veil lifted, and she saw the laughing eyes of the other David.

"You!" he chuckled derisively. He flung open the heavy door and turned back to her, and his voice was suddenly shaken.

"There's a family tradition about these things," he said. And lifting her into his arms, he stepped across the threshold.

Then Jacob went on his journey, and came into the land of the porphyry on the east.

And he looked, and behold a well in the field, and, lo, there were three flocks of sheep lying by it; for out of that well they watered the flocks; and a great stone was upon the well's mouth.

And thither were all the flocks gathered; and they rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth in his place.

And Jacob said unto them, my brethren, whence are ye?
And they said, Of Haran are we.
And he said unto them, Know ye Laban the son of Nahor? And they said, We know him.

And he said unto them, Is he well, and behold, Rachel his daughter cometh with the sheep.

And he said, Lo, it is yet high day, neither is it time that the cattle should be gathered together, water ye the sheep, and go and feed them.

And they said, We cannot, until all the flocks be gathered together, and till they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep.—Genesis 29:1-8.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

GIVING ALL—ASKING NOTHING

NATURE asks nothing of us, yet from her hoard of beauty and wealth we live, thrive happily, and grow selfish from her free gifts.
"What better note," says Michael Fairless in her lovely Roadmender, "can our frail tongues lip than the voice of wind and sea, river and stream, those grateful servants giving all and asking nothing, the soft whisper of snow and rain eager to replenish, or the thunder proclaiming a majesty too great for utterance?"

These thrilling autumn days—what do they ask of us? If they had more than their silent whispers in sound, or their silent voices in the fragrance and color which they scatter and present to the consciousness of us all, they would still present them free to us, as their gifts.

How far from being grateful we are as we tread the days and measure out life's span in the midst of beauty and wonder! What do we give back in return? How very much we all accept from so many sources, without any attempt at all at returning! Not that we are expected to make a return—that would spoil all giving—but that we should wish to give without any thought of ever receiving a return to ourselves.

What could we possibly give back to the stars, the moon, the sun, the gray-blue of the mountain shadows, the warmth of the wind, or the crystal, white glow of the fresh snow from the sky? What could we return to the white water lily, pulled from its nest in the mud of the lake? What could we return to the rose for its scent of fragrance or its presentation of exquisite beauty? What poor creatures we are! We take so much, we give so little.

Only as we appreciate do we give back, even though invisibly. The cheers and applause of the audience mean far more to the artist than the mere money return for all his years of labor and of love. The speculator gains money, but in return he gets nothing but envy for his luck.

Give all that you can, in every way that you can. Ask nothing. You will receive much!

Junior Bullets Admitted Free to College Contests

Alright, you boys and girls up to high school age, you are members of the famed Junior Bullets of Gettysburg college. You don't have to have tickets and you'll not have any difficulty with the gate keepers if you read carefully and follow instructions that follow.

Every youngster in Gettysburg, up to high school age, will be admitted to all home athletic contests at Gettysburg college, FREE, according to C. E. Bilheimer, athletic director at the college.

Junior Bullets don't even have to pay a tax, state or federal. There isn't going to be any undue fuss about admitting the youngsters, Mr. Bilheimer said.

Guests of College
"We want every boy and girl in Gettysburg, up to high school age, to know that we are anxious to have them attend every home athletic contest at college as our guests. We like the youngsters and we want them to become part of our institution."

"For the football season we have reserved a special stand for them. It is adjoining the big concrete and steel stand. All Junior Bullets must use the gate behind the big stand. This is reserved for them and all they have to do is walk in, take any seat in their own stand and enjoy the game."

There was some difficulty several weeks ago about the youngsters being compelled to pay a tax on their tickets but this has been ironed out satisfactorily. No tickets. No tax. No trouble. The youngsters are to be guests of the college.

Reserved Stand
Older boys and girls will not be permitted to use the stand reserved for the Junior Bullets. This is their stand. Everybody else must keep out.

But, the youngsters are requested to behave like little ladies and gentlemen and not to create any disturbance. They have always been well behaved in past years and this same conduct is expected of them this year. Parents are asked to explain to them how the Junior Bullets' program will be worked this year.

Saturday's game with Juniata here will start at 2:30 o'clock.

The man with the small business often feels that he is not as welcome at the bank as the head of some larger enterprise.

That is not the attitude of this bank. Bigness may often be partly a matter of chance, of opportunity, or of established age.

The small or young business, on the other hand, may grow, especially with the right kind of banking cooperation. We are always ready to extend that cooperation in every possible way.
